

I am very upset about the Sinclair Broadcasting's group using their airwave power stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary right before the election. It is clearly an example of unfair broadcasting. They and other stations have not aired the several well made documentaries about the wrongs of the Bush administration. They are not planning to show Going Upriver about John Kerry's life and yet they think showing STOLEN HONOR is fair broadcasting.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you. Nan Wicker
